FARMERS SHOULD NOTICE THIS

The following letter has been received by Mr. A. H. Rygg of the Burdett Mercantile Company

The House of Commons, Ottawa, September 10th, 1919.

Dear Mr. Rygg: I have received a marked copy of the Bow Island Review and noticed the article about "Relief" as you know I have been urging this matter for some time and I can assure you that the Dominion Government are prepared to pay it's share but the actual handling of the "Relief" will rest with the Provincial Government.

The Dominion Government will share in the expense

Yours respectfully, W. A. Buchanan,

The above letter is well worthy of note, for its clearly shows that the Government have been obliged to acknowledge their responsibility to the Farmers needing Relief in the Drought stricken areas of Alberta

But although the Government has expressed its willingness to help—still at the same time they do not seem to have That Much Needed Relief Is To Begin

The Farmers need that help Right Now, so that they can take advantage of these late rains to plow the thousands of acres now ready for next Spring's seeding for next years Crop

To do this immense work they need good feed for their horses and in many many cases for themselves — not the inferior Feed that has in the past been handed out to the Farmers which has been caused by someone trying to get Rich quickly, out of Relief given to the poor farmers.

Now we ask the Government again, when is that Relief coming, as it is urgently needed Right Now?

We know, that the Bow Island Branch of the U.F.A. will use the most energetic measures, to have our own U.F.A. Farmers get their full share of this Relief, which they most thoroughly deserve.

Our trust in our own U.F.A. will not be shattered of that we feel sure: now Farmers watch closely and you will see your trust, in our U.F.A. is in good hands

Bow Island

The Ladies of the Rest Room on Main Street and other near residents, have been greatly disturbed for a long time past by fearful smells and people were wondering where these fever laden breezes were coming from, eventually a lady suggested ripping up some of the flooring, and then the cause of the smells was immediately found for underneath the floors of the Chinese Laundry, the Tinsmiths, and the Rest Room was a pool of foul washing water and mud which was ever increasing, because the Chinese in the Chinese Laundry had emptied week after week and month after month, all their dirty and fouled washing water; and the heat of the Summer months has turned all this into a putrid mass of corruption ready at any minute to burst out into a wholesale Epidemic of the most Virulent type.

All reasonable people think that this Chinese Laundry should be compelled to move to the outside of this Town and not to be allowed to endanger the lives of all the Townspeople with their filthy and unsanitary ways of living and working.

When these Chinese were ordered to remove this foul mass and they proceeded to do so, the Stench was awful, and as they brought out the fearful black Slime, it was so thick, it stood on end.

Surely our Townspeople will not stand for this, but will unite to see that this Chinese menace is made to move on to the outside of the Town and at a very early date

For the people to allow a Chinese Laundry to occupy a position on the Main Street is not Good Business nor a good advertisement for any Town.

But above all we speak for the good health of Everybody in Town

Among the visitors to Bow Island last week was Mr. Blake Cook the representative of the Rexall Co. Mr. Blake our local druggist asked Mr. Cook to recommend that the Company hold another one cent sale here this fall, it is to be hoped the request will be granted for the great saving such a sale makes for the people would surely be appreciated in times like these

Good Roads And Education

In a report made to the Minister of Education for Saskatchewan, Mr. D. S. McConnell, chief attendance officer in the province, to whom is entrusted the administration of the Compulsory School Attendance Act, in part, as among the reasons assigned for the absence of children from rural schools. "Impossible roads, but this is a condition which will improve as the province grows older."

In previous issues, the writer of this column has dwelt upon the importance and necessity of good roads in these western provinces, and also upon the absolute necessity that farm boys and girls should be given the best possible education and kept in school as long as possible. In this article we hope to make clear the bearing which the provision of good roads has upon the successful carrying out of a better school policy and a higher average attendance at school.

There are four main groups under which every problem treated as peculiar to rural communities are or can be properly grouped:

First: Greater production or more intensive farming, which is primarily a question of more population on the land.

Second: Proper educational facilities for the boys and girls, or provision for a high school education without forcing parents to travel on farm at the period of their greatest production in order to give their children an even start with the town boy and girl in educational equipment.

Third: Proper social and amusement facilities for the entire family as a primary means of keeping them contented with life on the farm.

Fourth: The development of a community spirit, through co-operation in a social and economic way, as the best means for guaranteeing the prosperity and contentment of all.

Third, roughly, do we group the various topics which concern the relations of the people one with another, as distinguished from those which deal with those things that concern the individual farmer, such as better crops and improved livestock.

Now analyse this proposition: The solution of all these problems, the one final answer to them, the one thing that will lay the foundation that will make them possible, and leaves but details in connection with each to be arranged, but without which success cannot be achieved, is a possible system of all-the-year good roads.

In some of our more thickly populated districts in the West, a consolidated school would mean a vast improvement over several small district schools. It would be a better school in every way, and provision for high school training would be possible. But without good roads for the conveyance of pupils the consolidated school and rural high school is impracticable, and many of such schools established in the United States have been abandoned solely because of the impossibility of transporting the school children over the existing roads.

But, it is said, it will take money to build roads. Certainly it will, and lots of it. But the city dweller cannot live in an eight or ten-room house with electric lights, hot water and other modern conveniences for the same utility that he can live in a cave. He pays for those conveniences and he finds that it pays him to pay for them. So with good roads—they will more than pay for themselves.

Here in Western Canada we are somewhat inclined to look upon the Province of Quebec as backward and slow because we are not fully informed of what is transpiring there. Within the past fifteen years Quebec has been forging ahead, general agriculture, dairying and livestock raising faster than Ontario, and in some respects more rapidly and substantially than these Western Provinces. Industrially and commercially it is going ahead by leaps and bounds, and a complete transformation is taking place educationally.

What is the basis for this development in Quebec? Everyone who has this important but often unasked question. The Province of Quebec has now the best roads in the Dominion, as far as it has gone, and it means to continue until every farmer can get his goods to market, his children to school, and his family to church, without a breakdown or being mired. Some years ago the Provincial Government asked for authority to spend $20,000,000 on roads. Some people who think the French-Canadian habit is generous and unprogressive might give some thought to the fact that they enthusiastically endorse the necessary authority. That $20,000,000 has been spent, and Quebec now leads the Dominion in good roads. Two or three months ago the Government appealed to the people for a new mandate to keep on spending millions on good roads, the result being a majority of returned supporters.

(Note—Further consideration of this subject will be reserved for next week.)

LEMONS MAKE SKIN WHITE, SOFT, CLEAR

Make This Beauty Lotion for a Few Cents and See for Yourself

What girl or woman hasn't heard of lemon juice to remove complexion blemishes; to whiten the skin and to bring out the roses, the freckles and the hidden beauty? But lemon juice is said, therefore, to be used, and should be mixed with alcohol white this way: Strain through a fine cloth the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing about three ounces of alcohol. Shake thoroughly and you have a whole quarter pint of skin and complexion lotion for a small jar of ordinary cold cream. Be sure to strain the lemon juice so no pulp gets into the bottle, then this lotion will remain pure and fresh for months. When applied daily to the face, neck, arms and hands it should help to bleach, clear, smooth and beautify the skin.

Any druggist will supply three ounces of alcohol white at very little cost and the grocer has the lemons.

Britain Needs More Modern Navy

United Kingdom And Dominions Must Furnish The Money

Vancouver, B.C.—A special cable from Sydney, N.S.W., to the Vancouver World says: "Unless the United Kingdom and the Dominions are prepared to put their hands in their pockets it will not be possible to retain the empire that sea supremacy which ever-civilized of the empire knows in his heart is vital to its existence," said Admiral Lord Jellicoe in a forceful speech delivered to a large and influential audience here.

"Lord Jellicoe went on to say that after reading the cable report of a letter written to the London Times by Lord Fisher, he was of the opinion that underlying Lord Fisher's demand for the scrapping of the present British Navy was the idea that the larger and more modern navy should be built."

Men listen when money talks. Probably that is why we sometimes hear of lush money.

There is no radical cure for laziness, but starvation will come the nearest to it.

Miller's Worm Powders work so effectively that no traces of worms can be found. The pests are maced in the stool and pass away in the stools without being perceptible. They make an entire and clean sweep of the intestines, and nothing but the shape of a worm is left behind when these powders are in operation. Nothing could be more thorough or desirable than their action.

Alberta Coal Discovery

It Is Possible That Anthracite Coal Also Extends In Quantities

Twelve or more seams of high-grade bituminous coal, all of great thickness, have been discovered to exist at the junction of the Smoky and Muskogee rivers, located north of the Canadian Northern Railway, west of Edmonton. O. S. Finnie, inspecting engineer of the mining lands branch of the department of the interior, has just returned following a month of close exploration work on behalf of the department. In addition to this high-grade bituminous coal is possible, according to Mr. Finnie, that anthracite coal also exists in quantities. Samples of the product will be sent to the laboratory by Mr. Finnie, and will undergo tests for later reports to governmental authorities. There is much evidence that the seams are in great seams, and investigation proves that not only is the quantity large but the quality is also good.

British Airship Plans

Let Private Firms Have Advantages With Rigid Airship

London.—The government has decided to retain only two airships of the rigid type and dispose of the others to a well-organized concern that would undertake to establish a commercial airship service. This announcement was made by Air Commissioner Seely at a conference of representatives of aeronautical and engineering firms.

He added that the decision was based upon the necessity of cutting down expenses and in the belief that the best results in the future were likely to be attained by the encouragement of private enterprise.

"Our daughter's face came out in a rash that we were told was eczema. Her cheeks got sore and she rubbed away the loss of sleep. The itching out was very hot and it seemed as if I had to tie the gloves on her hands to keep her from scratching."

"This trouble lasted about six weeks before I used Cuticura. I used one large box of Cuticura Ointment with two cakes of Cuticura Soap when she was healed." (Signed) Mrs. H. B. Baines, Elizabeth, N.J. Oct. 1904.

FREQUENT HEADACHES

A Sure Sign That The Blood Is Impure

People with thin blood are much more subject to headaches than full-blooded persons, and the form of anemia that affects growing girls is most often accompanied by irregular attacks, together with disturbance of the digestive organs.

Whenever you have constant or recurring headaches and palor of the face, you should be sure to take Pink Pills, which will remove the headache.

More disturbing to health are cases where the blood than most people have any idea of. When your blood is impoverished, the nerves suffer from lack of nourishment, and may be troubled with insomnia, neuritis, neuralgia or sciatica. Muscles may be weakened, the body may be muscular, rheumatism or lumbago.

If your blood is thin and you begin to show symptoms of any of these disorders, try to build up the blood with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as the blood is restored to its normal condition every symptom of the trouble will disappear. There are more people than you think of who are in need of good health to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills than to any other medicine, and most of them do not hesitate to say so.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail. Send $1.00 to Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Great Silver Deposits Located In Burma

Chinese Worked It Until Cuddie Applications Failed

London.—At a time so long ago that the very memory of it has faded Chinese prospectors, wandering over Burma, found a silver-bearing deposit and worked it until their crude appliances failed them. Then they left it.

For centuries the workings lay abandoned and unheeded. But some years ago the deposit was rediscovered and floated as the Burma Corporation, whose shares knocked about on an uninterested market at rubbish prices.

Development and assay have now revealed the interesting fact that these long-dormant yellow men left behind them one hundred million ounces of silver, one million tons of lead, 750,000 tons of zinc, 30,000 tons of copper, the whole valued at present prices at between eighty and ninety million pounds sterling.

These shares have now risen to nearly ten, and a new company is to be formed in India with a capital equivalent to fifty million dollars.

Japan Violates Agreement

Is Now Placing Morphia On Sale In China

Greenslade, Ind.—"Japan is now violating the international agreement on the sale of morphia by sending the drug into China and placing it on sale there through strictly legitimate channels," declares William W. Lockwood of this city, who has spent years with Young Men's Christian Association work in China, and who has been director in charge of this work at Shanghai.

Following, shutting off of the production of opium in China," Mr. Lockwood said, "the trade for morphia with Japan grew rapidly. In the provinces or cities dominated by the Japanese the sale is heaviest."

There the Japanese have established their own police office and the parcels of the morphia are sent through the Japanese mails to China and are then distributed to the consumer through Japanese druggists. The price is exceedingly high, due to the fact that the Chinese government forbids its manufacture, and the fact that it is a more powerful drug than opium.

"A newspaper in Tientsin made an investigation of the sale of morphia by the Japanese. In the capital of the Province of Shantung representatives of the newspaper purchased morphia in 200 packages."

Sunken Eyes Brighten Quickly, Health Returns

In a Message to Ailing Women Doctors
Hamilton Tells How It Is Done

In speaking of the ills from which women suffer, Dr. Hamilton points out that nine out of every ten are by nature inclined to habitual constipation. Harsh purgatives are resorted to, which only intensify the trouble. Although not generally known, it is a complicated condition of the bowels that causes both sickness and tired weariness with which all womenkind is so familiar. It was after long years of study that Dr. Hamilton perfected the pills which have been of such extraordinary benefit to women the world over. In his pills of Mandrake and Bittern every sufferer will find an absolute specific for constipation, sick headache, and biliousness. It is safe to say that Dr. Hamilton's pills bring better health and cheer to the system in a more vigorous condition than any other medicine ever discovered. At all dealers, in 50c boxes.

Filling His Own Shoes

—BY—
HENRY C. ROWLAND

Copyrighted. Printed by special arrangement with Thea. Allen, Toronto.

Ruggles had no desire to crowd his wares on Darthea. Per the sale of the Walkeasy Company he might have made the effort to hold her. But for his own sake he would not. So, with his heart like lead in its stirring for the death of her sympathy, and his eyes as hungry as those of a dog for a slight hint of kindness, he said:

"All right. Then I suppose there's no need for me to bother you any longer. Maybe you're right. After all, I'm not in the same class with you, I guess. I might have known it—if I hadn't—if I hadn't." His voice caught in his throat and he walked toward the door, which was rather blurred and indistinct. Darthea followed him, straight and stiff and white as an Easter lily.

He opened the door of the ante chamber, went out and turned.

"Good-bye," he said.

"Good-bye," Darthea answered, her hand on the knob to close the door behind him.

"Good-bye," Ruggles repeated. "I won't bother you again."

"Sure," Ruggles said. "I forgot. Good-bye, Miss Westbrooke. Say, Darthea," he added desperately, for she had stepped back and was closing the door, "I haven't been hearing more I want to tell you."

"Good-bye, Darthea," he said. "It was the first time that he had ever called her 'Darthea.'"

"Miss Westbrooke, please," said Darthea, snatching away her hand. "Sure," Ruggles said. "I forgot. Good-bye, Miss Westbrooke. Say, Darthea," he added desperately, for she had stepped back and was closing the door, "I haven't been hearing more I want to tell you."

"Thank you, Mr. Ruggles," said Darthea, in her most liquid voice.

"You're awfully kind, I'm sure. Good-bye."

And the door closed gently in Ruggles's face.

CHAPTER VII

Ruggles went out into the street half-dressed, as he was to his eyes. But these conditions were as nothing compared to the mystification of his mind. No doubt he felt rather like a dog which has been caught and whipped without in the least understanding why (perhaps because the cat had misbehaved during the night). Ruggles had no knowledge of any cat, nor did he, as many might have done, consider Darthea as of this class of supreme egoists. He did not blame Darthea.

Your Granulated Eyelids, newly inflamed by exposure, relieved by Murrie's Eye Remedy. No stinging. No smarting. For Back of the Eye. Murrie's Eye Remedy Co., Chicago.

he did not blame anybody. He was merely very puzzled and very sad. Wandering aimlessly, he crossed the Gardens and came out on the Boulevard Saint-Michel, then turned following the line of least resistance and because it was easier to walk downhill than on the level. Men were to be met with after such an experience as that of Ruggles. He was tired, now, having walked several miles in the course of the morning, with very little rest, and under extraordinary circumstances but all the spring appeared to have gone out of his bones, and on arriving opposite the Cafe Harcourt he slid in behind a table with his back to the wall and ordered coffee.

Repose and the kick mixture of chicory and some few beans of the order Rubiacene contributed to clear Ruggles's bewildered brain. With clearer thought came also a certain amount of better cheer, for Ruggles, as has been several times said, was a born optimist. After all, the situation was not so hopeless. Darthea was an artist and very young, and for both reasons infused with more life than the average woman. He had come spinning into her life like a plumed knight-errant and she had endowed him with a certain strength of character.

Although conscious of a station tiered sentiment for Darthea, Ruggles was by no means in love with her, nor did he desire her in this respect. But she was the first girl friend of her class that the boy had ever known, and this friendship had been very sweet and dear to him; more so, perhaps, than if it had been colored with passion. He was very fond of her, and he could not but be attracted to her, and he admired and respected her, and it cut him deeply, not only in his pride, but in his heart, that she could think him unworthy of her.

It may have been that Ruggles had some real and pressing need of her sympathy and help, and that he was in a state of natural graciousness of manner. At any rate, the instant she entered, all of Ruggles's embarrassment melted, and as their eyes met, he felt that he had made no mistake in coming to her.

"Hi do you do, Mr. Ruggles?" said Ruth, and offered him her firm little hand. "I'm very glad to see you," she said. "I've been waiting for you." Ruth was her father's own daughter, her brother's own sister, and an employee of the Walkeasy Company in a French department, and she had been at her hands. She would have received the door-bell of the Paris store if she had known that he was in the service of the company. The New York State manager, whom her father had asked to dine with them, had been told that he was in the city, and he had worked his way up through factory and salaried work, and had had no contact for a long time with his family.

It was still, however, with a very heavy heart that Ruggles crossed the street and entered the City Hotel. He found his father and mother in the Champs Elysees on his way back to the little room in Passy where he had been staying. He had nearly reached the Carlton when he saw a big limousine, with a chauffeur and an exquisitely groomed girl, followed by an elderly woman, descend and enter the hotel. Though still at some distance, Ruggles saw the girl and recognized the girl at the very first glance. It was none other than Ruth Downing.

It was a sudden revelation, the dawning of which caused Ruggles's healthy young heart to whirr like a starting tachometer, feeling him up and down, as sailors say. Here, sent perhaps by Providence, was his friend in need. Less than an hour ago he had been vanquishing the loyalty of the Downing family to their great army of vassals. He would put this loyalty to the test. He would call upon Ruth, explain his trouble, and would after all more or less her own doing, having first his heart with ambivalence and demand her sympathy and advice.

There was nothing presumptuous about this swift decision on the boy's part. He felt honestly that it was right, and there was about it something rather fine and belonging to a fabled age. His mother and father had been vanquishing the loyalty of the Downing family to their great army of vassals. He would put this loyalty to the test. He would call upon Ruth, explain his trouble, and would after all more or less her own doing, having first his heart with ambivalence and demand her sympathy and advice.

was better shod or stockinged. It is probable that there was not at that moment a better looking young fellow between the Louvre and the gates of the Bois de Boulogne than our modest shoemaker. He entered the fashionable life with an air of assurance which he was far from feeling and sent up his card to Miss Downing's social card, which was inscribed simply "Mr. Richard T. Ruggles." Ruggles was proud of that card, because two-thirds of it was identical with Richard P. Downing, junior and senior.

The boy returned presently to say that Miss Downing would receive him, simply "Mr. Richard T. Ruggles." Ruggles mounted in the lift, glanced at himself in the mirror and pushing back a long lock of wavy yellow hair, which was slightly damp, he was ushered into a salon prettily furnished in Louis XV. style, and perched on a chair, a chair a good deal as a bird repels itself, for a brief instant on a swaying twig.

The bell-boy bowed and retired, and Ruggles was alone. He was not a nervous man, but he was not a timid one. He was beginning to repent of his temerity. Then the door to an adjoining room opened, and Ruth entered. Ruggles could not resist to his dying day what she wore. It had been a bathing peignoir, it is probable that he would not have observed the fact.

It may have been that Ruth had second sight and divined that Ruggles had some real and pressing need of her sympathy and help, and that he was in a state of natural graciousness of manner. At any rate, the instant she entered, all of Ruggles's embarrassment melted, and as their eyes met, he felt that he had made no mistake in coming to her.

Province Seeks Own Powers

British Columbia Wants Jurisdiction to Deal With Protesting

Vancouver, B.C., June 24.—The province of British Columbia municipalities met here, with Hon. J. W. D. Park, attorney-general, to discuss the province's policy of control over the province's municipalities. The province has been living, and adopted a resolution suggesting the appointment of a provincial board of commerce for British Columbia, with full powers and administrative powers, to be appointed and administered by the federal government.

It was argued that the existing board of commerce, working from Ottawa, was too distant to be fully effective on the Pacific coast, and the feeling was that this federal board should be supplemented by a body with provincial jurisdiction, but with equal powers. The gathering asked the board of commerce to establish a legal business "spread" as an initial basis upon which profits could be figured where essential commodities were concerned.

A Chemical Entente

At the recent annual meeting of the Association of British Chemical Manufacturers it was announced that a friendly understanding had been come to between the British and French chemical industries for co-operation in international development. The British association now represents £70,000,000 of capital invested, and continued rapid growth in the department of dyes and fine chemicals, is assured. The importance of chemical progress in its relation to industrial efficiency and the life of a nation cannot be overestimated, and everything possible will be done to hold and extend the international advance made in Great Britain in response to the necessity for sudden development during war time.

It is hard to get a dyspeptic to believe that the millennium will ever come.

Mounted Police Strength

For First Time in History Now in Excess of Sixteen Hundred

Regina, Sask.—For the first time in the history of the province the strength of the R.N.W.M.P. is in excess of 1,600 all ranks. Shortly after the outbreak of the war 500 men were disbanded for a period of one year, bringing the strength to more than 1,500.

At the expiration of the year these men enlisted in various units where they learned there was no chance of the force going overseas as a unit. Continued enlistment and drafts brought the force to low ebb about a year ago.

BABY HAD DIARRHOEA WAS GIVEN UP

EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY
CURED HER

Mothers should look well after their children during the hot summer months, as the heat of the sun when the young ones are liable to all kinds of ailments and diseases. If your children have any looseness of the bowels do not experiment with any other medicine but give them Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It has been on the market for the past 74 years. Don't accept a substitute and perhaps endanger your child's life.

Mr. Willis Comland, Sunderland, Ont., writes: "About four years ago my little girl, baby, had a severe case of old diarrhoea. I took her to Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and immediately got a bottle. Within two days she was improving fast. Some poor sufferers will see this letter and lead them to a friend indeed. Airship Program Reduction

London, England.—In accordance with the government's policy of economy, it has been decided to reduce the airship program, and work on several airships of the B-34 class which were nearing completion has been stopped. Certain airships and airship stations are to be placed at the disposal of commercial firms for the purpose of the development of commercial flying.

Order Farms Seized

Berlin.—The Prussian minister of agriculture has empowered the local communities to seize farms, whose owners refuse to enter labor contracts with their employees, or who fail to live up to the wage scales and other terms ended by contracts. The farms to be seized are to be administered by the respective communities for the common good.

Open Northern Lands To Ranchmen

Grazing Laws to Be Changed, According to Interior Department News

Ottawa.—The Department of the Interior has announced important changes in the regulations regarding grazing leases which are of particular interest to the West. The drought conditions which have prevailed in the southern portion of the prairie provinces have resulted in representations being made to the department by the possessors of small herds of from 50 to 500 cattle, for permission to move to lands farther north where better grazing facilities offer. Changes have been made in the grazing regulations to permit of this. There are large areas of land in these northern prairie districts which, because of remoteness from settlement, liability to frost, or swampy or gravelly character of the soil, are not adapted to agricultural production, but which are, nevertheless, quite suitable for grazing purposes. The Minister of the Interior, Hon. A. McEachern, after careful consideration of the representations made, decided to alter the regulations to the benefit of the interests of this region as a whole if ranchers who wished to establish themselves permanently upon such areas and who had the proper qualifications, were permitted to migrate and settle there. In no case, however, was the arrangement to be allowed to interfere with any promise movement to settle farmers on lands suitable for agricultural purposes.

Under the present grazing regulations leases are limited to a term not exceeding ten years, and in no case larger than 12,000 acres, and in no case may a lease be issued to other than a British subject. These conditions in force it was determined that ranchers of the kind desired would not move their herds and establish their homes in the more northern country, where climatic conditions were such that they would be compelled to provide fodder for the winter months and to erect corrals and sheds for the protection of the stock, unless greater permanency of tenure were offered and in some cases, owing to sparsity of vegetation, a larger area per head of stock.

Do Not Want Canadians to Remain in England

London.—The proposal to establish a permanent host for the benefit of Canadian soldiers who have taken their discharge in England does not meet the approval of the Canadian authorities here. The opinion is prevalent that many of these men and their wives who have decided to remain in England will be a couple of years or so to be equally anxious to return to Canada. One of the reasons for this is that at the time a certain class of demobilized soldiers, who have been in England during the past five years are a bit shabby at the wages now being paid, forgetting that the cost of living is steadily mounting. It is expected that British and Canadian government action will eventually have to be taken over this matter.
